The LibreTexts mission is to bring together students, faculty, and scholars in a collaborative effort to provide an accessible, and comprehensive platform that empowers our community to develop, curate, adapt, and adopt openly licensed resources and technologies; through these efforts we can reduce the financial burden born from traditional educational resource costs, ensuring education is more accessible for students and communities worldwide.

Most, but not all, pages in the library have licenses that may allow individuals to make changes, save, and print this book. Carefully consult the applicable license(s) before pursuing such effects. Instructors can adopt existing LibreTexts texts or Remix them to quickly build course-specific resources to meet the needs of their students. Unlike traditional textbooks, LibreTexts' web based origins allow powerful integration of advanced features and new technologies to support learning.

LibreTexts is the adaptable, user-friendly non-profit open education resource platform that educators trust for creating, customizing, and sharing accessible, interactive textbooks, adaptive homework, and ancillary materials. We collaborate with individuals and organizations to champion open education initiatives, support institutional publishing programs, drive curriculum development projects, and more.

1.1: Presentations - Verb Tense Review

This page titled 1.1: Presentations - Verb Tense Review is shared under a CC BY-NC 4.0 license and was authored, remixed, and/or curated by Nooshi Borhan.

1.2: Exercise

Fill in the blanks with the appropriate form of the given verb. Hi-light the keyword that helps you choose the correct verb tense.

e.g. She has [have] classes on Tuesdays and Thursdays. [routine/habit → simple present tense]

1. I _____ [live] in Mexico when I was a child.
2. After class today, Maria _____ [go] to her job.
3. We _____ [take] Grammar 4 next semester.
4. My parents _____ [live] in California.
5. The students _____ [do] a grammar exercise now.
6. I _____ [find] $20 yesterday.
7. My family _____ [go] on vacation once a year.
8. I _____ [take] 4 classes last semester.
9. I _____ [take] 3 classes this semester.
10. My best friend _____ [send] me letters regularly.
11. When I finish all my ESL classes, I _____ [study] nursing.
12. Last night, I _____ [do] my homework between 9:30 and 11 pm.
13. My brother _____ [go] to the park with his daughter on Sundays.
14. We _____ [love] to study grammar!

1.3: Review & Writing

Verb tense review & writing

Write a paragraph about your life using the following questions as a guide.

Make sure:

- that the paragraph contains all the answers to the questions
- that the paragraph reads as a 'story', not as disjointed sentences
- to use the correct verb tenses [use the questions as a guide]
- to have a subject & verb in every sentence
- to use correct punctuation [put a period at the end of each sentence]
- to follow capitalization rules [start every sentence with a capital letter]
- to double-space your writing

1. Where do you live?
2. Who do you live with?
3. Do you like where you live? Why?
4. When did you move here?
5. Where did you live before you came to the U.S.?
6. Who did you live with back home?
7. How was your life like back home?
8. Why did you move to the U.S.?
9. When did you start studying at CCC?
10. How many classes are you taking this semester?
11. What are your goals?
12. How long will you study at CCC?
13. What will you do after you finish taking ESL classes?

1.4: Review Exercise - Find Someone Who

Find someone who:

First, write a question for each of the following items to ask your classmates. Then, walk around the classroom and ask one question from each classmate. If your classmate answers 'yes', write his/her name down. If he/she says 'no', say goodbye, and ask someone else! You can only write a name down if the person says yes.

- Lives in Richmond
- Takes the bus to college
- Lived in Mexico when he/she was a child
- Is going home after class
- Will go away this weekend
- Knows how to speak 3 languages
- Had a wonderful winter holiday
- Has 2 brothers
- Is going to work this weekend
- Is shy
- Went to the movies last week

This page titled 1.4: Review Exercise - Find Someone Who is shared under a CC BY-NC 4.0 license and was authored, remixed, and/or curated by Nooshi Borhan.

1.5: Review Exercise - Chart

Read each example carefully. Circle the verb. Explain why the verb tense is used. Underline any key words that guide you.

Verb Tense	Usage	Example
Simple Present	1. 2.	1. She takes the bus every day. 2. Mr. and Mrs. Garcia live in Albany
Present Continuous	1. 2.	1. I am explaining verb tenses to my students. 2. She is having lunch with a friend after class.
Simple Past	1. 2.	1. I went home after work yesterday. 2. When she was a child, she lived in Mexico.
Past Continuous	1. 2.	1. I was reading between 9 and 11 pm last night. 2. They were watching TV when the earthquake happened.
Future	1. 2.	1. I will visit my friend on Saturday. 2. I am going to visit my friend on Saturday.

1.6: Review Exercise - Identify

For each of the following, underline the subject and circle the verb. Then, determine the verb tense. Finally, explain why the verb tense is used.

For example:

I work at Contra Costa College.

1. She walks to the park every afternoon.
2. My neighbor has 3 cars.
3. She was born in Mexico.
4. I had a lot of homework last week.
5. I will go back to my country for the Christmas holidays.
6. She is going to the library after class today.
7. I am answering questions for my grammar class.
8. Maria was working from 9-5 yesterday.
9. Maria works from 9-5 every day.
10. I am going to go to the library tomorrow.
11. My family lives in Texas.
12. I take classes on Mondays and Wednesdays.

1.7: Review Exercise - Story

[1]Hi-lite the verb[s] in each sentence. [2]Identify the verb tense. [3]Explain why it is used.

My name is Nooshi. I will be your teacher this semester. I want to tell you a little bit about myself. I was not born in the United States! I was born in England! My parents are from Iran but they lived in England for a few years when my father was studying in a college in England at that time. So, my brother and I were both born in England. When I was one year old, we went back to our country, Iran. I grew up in Iran. I lived there until I was 13 years old. I have many memories from my childhood. I spent a lot of time with friends and relatives. I played soccer with my brother and friends and rode my bicycle for fun.

When I was 13, I left Iran to come to the United States. My mother and brother were already living here. So, I started high school in California at that time. I went to two different high schools in Modesto, California. when I graduated from High School, I applied to U.C. Berkeley. I was very happy when I got accepted to U.C. Berkeley because it was my dream to go to college there. I started college at 17. It was all-new, exciting, and a little scary. At first, I wasn't sure what major I wanted to study. I began with science and math classes. But soon I realized that I didn't enjoy those subjects. After a couple of years of trying different classes, I discovered Sociology! I decided to major in Sociology and minor in English Literature. And I loved it!

After I finished my Bachelor's degree, I went on to get a couple of Master's Degrees at San Francisco State University. First, I studied Teaching English as a Second Language. Then, a couple of years ago, I went back and studied Equity and Social Justice in Education. It was wonderful to be a student again and it helped me understand my students' challenges as they work and go to school.

I have been teaching E.S.L. at Contra Costa College since 2001. I love my job! I have wonderful students from all over the world. And I learn a lot from my students; I learn about their cultures, ideas, and experiences. Every semester, I meet interesting people. And I love to see my students improve their English, feel more confident about themselves, and get closer to achieving their goals.

I am very happy to be your teacher this semester. And I hope we will have lots of fun and learn a lot in class together!

1.8: Practice Quiz

PART I. Fill in the blanks with the appropriate form of the given verb. Circle or highlight any keywords. Be ready to explain why you chose each verb tense!

1. I _____ [go] to San Francisco last weekend.

3. She _____ [take] 4 classes this semester.
4. She _____ [take] 3 classes last semester.
5. She _____ [take] 2 classes next semester.
6. My parents _____ [work] in California.
7. My students _____ [attend] a grammar class now.
8. He _____ [have] three cars.
9. I _____ [meet] my friend after class today.
10. We _____ [have] class on Tuesdays and Thursdays.
11. Last night, I _____ [eat] dinner when the phone _____ [ring].

PART II. Answer each question with a complete sentence. Pay attention to sentence structure, verb tenses, and correct punctuation.

1. Where did you live before you moved to the U.S.?
2. What did you usually do on the weekends in your country?
3. What do you usually do on the weekends here in the U.S.?
4. How are you feeling today?
5. What are you doing after class today?
6. What will you do this weekend?
7. What do you do in your free time?
8. What were you doing between 11 pm and 12-midnight last night?
9. When did you move to the U.S.?

1.9: Caught Between Two Worlds -Reading

Caught Between Two Worlds

[1] Teenage years are challenging—for teenagers and parents. It is a time for teenagers to break away from their family and to begin to make a life for themselves. It is a time when parents need to let go of their children and recognize that their role has changed forever. Adolescence is therefore difficult for all families, but it is particularly challenging for immigrant families. In these families, teenagers and parents struggle with the adolescent years while also trying to adapt to an unfamiliar culture.

[2] Many cultures have clear rules to guide teenagers through these years. There are clear rules, for example, about what is acceptable for a girl to wear and about dating. A daughter is not allowed to go out in the evening unless she is with her brother or cousin. She must wear certain traditional clothes. A son knows he must come home by a specific time. Teenagers understand this because they have grown up with these cultural rules. However, what happens to these rules when the family moves to a different country with a different culture? Do the cultural rules and expectations of the native culture still apply?

[3] Many immigrant parents would answer yes. They need these rules to protect their children from the dangers of the new culture. Moreover, these rules worked for them when they were teenagers. So why shouldn't they work for their children?

[4] Many teenagers, however, have a different answer. They, too, have grown up in their native culture, and the rules and expectations are very important to them. However, they are now learning a new culture and probably learning it faster than their parents. The old rules do not work in the new culture. Freedom is very important in the new culture: freedom to question teachers and parents, to take personal responsibility, to make and learn from mistakes. Teenagers from immigrant families quickly learn there are no clear rules about being a teenager in this culture. Girls have boys as friends, but may or may not have a 'boyfriend'. If a teen is dating, there are no strict rules about how to behave—even about sex. Life outside the home is complicated, and the old rules do not help.

[5] Lien's family provides an example of the conflict that can develop between family members during this time. The family moved to the States from Vietnam when she was ten. Her father was a car mechanic in Vietnam. They lived in a nice house and had a comfortable life. Her parents believed, however, that Lien and her twin brother, Thu, would have more opportunities in America. So, like many immigrant parents, they moved to a different country because of their children. "This is all for you and your brother", the mother has told Lien several times a week since they arrived.

[6] Lien was excited when she first arrived in Boston, but she soon found that life was not easy in America. Her father got a job, but he hated it. Her mother stayed in their apartment cooking traditional Vietnamese food for the evening meal. They didn't make any American friends. Lien quickly learned English, but her parents found it very difficult. They only spoke Vietnamese at home. When Lien's father was sick, Lien had to go to the doctor with him and explain what was wrong. This was very embarrassing for Lien and her father. At the grocery store, Lien's mother nervously stood behind her young daughter. Life was difficult, but the family was strong and stayed together. Everyone worked hard.

[7] Things changed, however, when Lien and her brother, Thu, turned fifteen and went to high school. Thu made new friends with a group of teenagers. He got a job at a local store and used this money to buy baggy pants and sweatshirts. He grew his hair and pierced one ear so he could wear an earring. He started to go out at night and didn't want to tell his parents where he was going. His parents were constantly fighting with him. They didn't like his clothes or his friends. "Why are you wearing those clothes? You look like a gang member," his mother would cry. "You shouldn't be with those other boys," his father would say. "They are a bad influence on you. You need to stay in and study. We came here for you and your sister, remember?"

[8] Lien was caught in the middle of two worlds. She understood why her parents were worried, but she also understood that her brother wanted to be a teenager like the other kids his age. She too wanted more freedom, but she didn't dare challenge her parents like her brother. As the family arguments became louder, Lien became quieter. She covered her ears in her bedroom as she heard her brother shout, "You don't understand! You're living in the old world. Just leave me alone."

[9] Thu finally left home in his last year of high school. He didn't finish school. Lien's parents disowned him; they refused to talk about him. They said to Lien, "this is all for you, Lien. You must work hard and do well." Lien wanted to explain to her parents that she, too, needed some freedom, but she didn't want any more fighting. So she kept quiet and worked hard.

[10] Of course, many immigrant families live through the teenage years without breaking up like Lien's family. However, most families experience some conflict during these years. Few parents can say they have never heard their teenage children saying, “You don’t understand.” Most parents say they often don’t understand their teenagers. So what can parents do during this difficult time to help themselves and their children?

[11] Experts have several suggestions. Parents shouldn’t stereotype teenagers. Their clothes might be strange, but this does not mean they are bad kids. Second, teenagers do not like to be told to do things, but this does not mean they do not like rules. In fact, most teenagers feel more comfortable if there are rules to help them behave. Parents and teenagers must talk about these rules. They should listen to each other and compromise. For example, if the teenager wants to come home at 2:00 am, and the parents want him home by 10:00 pm, they can compromise on 12:00. Finally, it’s easy to criticize teenagers too much. Teenagers make a lot of mistakes, but that is part of growing up. Parents, however, must never only criticize. Instead, they need to praise the teens and look for positive things in their behavior.

[12] It is difficult for immigrant teenagers to have one foot in the traditional world represented by their home and their family and the other foot in the “new” world of their friends and school. These teens often talk about living in an “in-between” place—feeling comfortable in neither the traditional nor the new world. In these situations, teenagers and their parents need to seek advice from people who have experience and knowledge of trying to raise teenagers in a second culture.

1.10: Review Exercise Assignment - Caught Between Two Worlds

Reading & Grammar Analysis

1. Read the story 'Caught Between Two Worlds'. Think about the story and write a paragraph to respond/react to the story. What do you think about it? How does it connect to your life and your culture? Give examples from your life to explain.
2. Read the story again. This time, find the subject and verb in each sentence. Underline subjects and circle verbs. Determine the verb tense and why it is used in each case. You may mark the answers on the reading.
3. In paragraphs 1-4, the simple present tense is used a lot. Why? What type of information is it providing?
4. In paragraphs 6-9, the past tense is used a lot. Why?
5. Towards the end of the story, in paragraphs 10-12, the writer uses a lot of the simple present tense again. Why?

1.14: Writing about the Past

Writing about the past

Write a paragraph about your life before you came to the U.S.

Include information about:

- where you lived,
- who you lived with,
- what you did during the week,
- what you did on the weekends,
- how you felt about your life,
- what you liked and what you didn't like about your life there, and
- why you decided to come to the U.S

Include rich information to make the story more vivid and powerful.

Pay attention to verb tenses: use the simple past tense to talk about things that started and finished in the past.

Try to write about 15 sentences – but make sure the ideas follow each other logically.

After you finish writing:

- Read your writing to see if you like what you wrote & if the ideas follow each other like a story!
- In each sentence, underline the subject & highlight the verb: did you use the past tense?
- Did you start each sentence with a capital letter?
- Did you end each sentence with a period?

2.13: Reading and Grammar Analysis

One of the best ways to improve your grammar is to read & analyze the grammar in readings.

Follow the instructions step by step to enjoy the reading.

Part 1. Before You Read

Take a few minutes to write about the topic:

'What do you know about DACA?'

If you don't know much, Find out:

- What does DACA stand for?
- Who is affected by it?
- Who are Dreamers?

Write down your thoughts or what you learn from your research in a short paragraph.

Part 2. Grammar Analysis

In each sentence, highlight the present perfect verb. The first one is done for you.

1. Since the program was announced in 2012, DACA has been a lifeline for immigrants who were brought to the U.S. as children.
2. Gonzales, the director of the Immigration Initiative at Harvard, has witnessed firsthand the life-changing effects of the program. For the past two decades, he has studied the outcomes of undocumented youth, before and after DACA was put in place.
3. And since the program's inception, he has surveyed over 2,600 recipients about how it has affected their lives.
4. I've heard from several colleagues.
5. DACA has made a tremendous impact on the lives of hundreds of thousands of young people over the last eight years.
6. All of the young people that we've met through this research have used their DACA benefits and status to benefit family members. They have been excited and proud to be able to do more to help their families.
7. For example, one woman we surveyed has done remarkably well with her DACA status.
8. She's moved into her own apartment.

Part 3. Reflect & Write

What did you think about the information in the reading? Write a paragraph to explain your reaction. You can also choose one part or one sentence in the reading that really resonated with you and explain why you are choosing it.

2.21: Present Perfect with Indefinite Time

In the following activity, write a question beginning with 'Have you ever + past participle of the verb' to ask your partner. You will then have the opportunity to ask your partner the questions and have a short conversation about each. The first one is done for you:

1. eat sushi → Have you ever eaten sushi?
2. find money in the street
3. write a poem
4. be in love
5. see a great movie
6. go to Los Angeles
7. sing in front of other people
8. ride a motorcycle
9. live in a different state in the U.S.

After you finish writing your questions, check your answers below:

1. Have you ever eaten sushi?
2. Have you ever found money in the street?
3. Have you ever written a poem?
4. Have you ever been in love?
5. Have you ever seen a great movie?
6. Have you ever gone to Los Angeles?
7. Have you ever sung in front of other people?
8. Have you ever ridden a motorcycle?
9. Have you ever lived in another state in the U.S.?

Work with a partner. Take turns asking each other the questions. If your partner says 'yes, I have', ask them a few more related questions to keep the conversation going. Pay attention to using the correct verb tenses in your questions and answer.

For example:

A: Have you ever eaten sushi?

B: Yes, I have.

A: Did you like it? / When did you last eat sushi? / Where did you eat sushi? / How often do you eat sushi?

2.27: Review Reading and Grammar Analysis

Work with a partner. Read the following story. Identify all verbs, verb tenses, and why the tense is used in each case. Look for key words and pay attention to meaning.

John lives in San Francisco. He is married and has two children. He met his wife in 2007 when they were both students in the university. After they met, they dated for a couple of years. Then, they got married. Since they got married, they've been very happy. They've been living together in a small apartment in San Francisco. John is a high school teacher and his wife, Jamie, is a doctor. At the beginning of their marriage, they went out together every night, had dinner, watched movies, or just went for long walks. But since they became parents, they haven't had very much time to spend alone. Because they have had so much more to do, they have needed to be much more organized and responsible. They have also had to share all the responsibilities of parenting, cooking, and cleaning. Most of the time, they are both exhausted! But at the same time, they're very happy.

2.29: Review - Coming up with Rules

Work with a partner. Circle the verb in each sentence/question. Come up with the rules/explanations for each of the following – why is the verb tense used?

Present perfect tense:

1)

- I have known you since the beginning of the semester.
- We haven't seen each other for many years.
- How long has she been married?

- She has called her mom twice today.
- We have had more than 10 classes so far.
- How much money have you spent this week?

3)

- I have already finished my homework.
- He has never been late to class.
- Have you ever lived alone?

Present perfect continuous tense:

1)

- She is waiting for the bus. She has been waiting for the bus for an hour.
- We have been practicing the present perfect tense since 12:40 pm.
- My partner has been sitting in his/her chair for 30 minutes.

- I have been living in California for more than 10 years.
- My sister has been wearing glasses since she was a child.
- How long have you been studying at CCC?

2.30: Writing: A Successful Person

Writing: A Successful Person

Write a paragraph about a person you personally know who in your opinion has been successful. Explain who this person is and why you believe he/she has been successful. What are things that he/she has accomplished in life that makes him/her a successful person in your eyes? Stay focused on the topic and provide relevant details that support your idea. Write about 150-200 words.

Use a minimum of:

- 3 examples of the present perfect
- 2 examples of the present perfect continuous
- 3 examples of the simple past

This page titled 2.30: Writing: A Successful Person is shared under a CC BY-NC 4.0 license and was authored, remixed, and/or curated by Nooshi Borhan.

2.31: Review Information - Simple Past Tense, Present Perfect, and Present Perfect Continuous

SIMPLE PAST

Usage: Finished action

Please note: verbs are highlighted in yellow and keywords/expressions are underlined and bold.

- She called me yesterday.
- I met you last week/month/year.
- I went to S.F. 2 days ago.
- When did you move here?
- When I moved here, I lived in Oakland.

PRESENT PERFECT - have/has + past participle

Usage:

1. Action started in the past and continues to the present [not finished]

Since: I have been a teacher since 2001.

For: I have been a teacher for 9 years.

How long: How long have you been a teacher?

2. Repetition

- I have gone to the library 3 times this week.
- She has called her mother twice today.

3. Indefinite/unknown time

Always: I have always wanted to learn Spanish.

Never: She has never seen a scary movie.

Ever[?]: Have you ever been to China?

Yet[-/?]: Have you called your friend yet?

Already[+]: I have already finished my work.

PRESENT PERFECT CONTINUOUS - have/has + been + verb-ing

Usages:

1. Action started in the past, continues to the present + is happening right now:

- I have been teaching since 12:45 pm today.
- You have been sitting in your seats since the class began.
- The sun has been shining for a few hours.

2. With work / live / study / wear / teach: instead of using present perfect, use present perfect continuous

Note: Both verb forms are fine with the following sentences but the present perfect continuous is more commonly used.

- I have studied Spanish for years. → I have been studying Spanish for years.
- I have lived in California since I moved to the U.S. → I have been living in California since I moved to the U.S.

Do not use the present perfect continuous:

1. With non-action verbs:

- She ~~has been wanting~~ to call you. → She has wanted to call you.

2. With repetition:

- I ~~have been going~~ to the library 3 times this week. → I have gone to the library 3 times this week.

3. With indefinite time:

- She ~~has already been eating~~ lunch. → She has already eaten lunch.
- I ~~have never been going~~ to China. → I have never gone to China.

2.32: Practice with Different Verb Tenses

Part 1. Complete the sentences with the present perfect tense of the verb.

1. She _____ married for 10 years. [be]

6. We usually go to the park to play games and watching some silly videos.
7. I know him almost 30 years.
8. I didn't see her since I came to the U.S.

Parallel Structure-Use the same form for every item in your list:

9. We usually do a lot of fun things together like doing our make up, go to parties and dance, watch movies or go to the mall.

Academic Tone-written English vs. Spoken English:

10. Some of the things we have in common are, we liked the same kind of music, and we also liked to take some trips with my family.
11. Some things we have done together throughout the years are that we have always participated in community activities such as painting the plaza, planting trees, dancing in some events, and organizing the festival for Mother's Day in our little town.

2.34: Error Correction Activity

Complete the activity below

Read each sentence or question. Think about the intended meaning and determine if the grammar is correct. Focus on the underlined part of each item. If there are any mistakes, correct them. If the sentence or question is correct, write 'correct' next to it. Pay attention to & highlight any keywords/expressions that help you decide.

1. How long do you work at your job?

2.36: Affordable Care Act Article - 2016

Immigrants, the Poor and Minorities Gain Sharply Under Affordable Care Act

Sergio Ortega, 51, lives in Los Angeles and received a prosthetic leg after an amputation because of complications related to diabetes. He says he had never been insured before getting covered by Medicaid in 2014. Credit...Emily Berl for The New York Times

By Sabrina Tavernise and Robert Gebeloff

April 17, 2016

LOS ANGELES - The first full year of the Affordable Care Act brought historic increases in coverage for low-wage workers and others who have long been left out of the health care system, a New York Times analysis has found. Immigrants of all backgrounds—including more than a million legal residents who are not citizens—had the sharpest rise in coverage rates.

Hispanics, a coveted group of voters this election year, accounted for nearly a third of the increase in adults with insurance. That was the single largest share of any racial or ethnic group, far greater than their 17 percent share of the population. Low-wage workers, who did not have enough clout in the labor market to demand insurance, saw sharp increases. Coverage rates jumped for cooks, dishwashers, waiters, as well as for hairdressers and cashiers. Minorities, who disproportionately worked in low-wage jobs, had large gains. The health care law was one of the most bitterly contested pieces of legislation in the country's history. It remains controversial because of its costs to both taxpayers and insurance customers. The high premiums and high deductibles of many plans still make coverage a crushing financial burden for some families.

And the law is not close to achieving the goal of universal coverage, in part because 19 states have declined to expand their Medicaid programs for the poor, an option the Supreme Court granted them in a landmark 2012 case. Nevertheless, the Times's analysis shows that by the end of that first full year, 2014, so many low-income people gained coverage that it halted the decades-long expansion of the gap between the haves and the have-nots in the American health insurance system, a striking change at a time when disparities between rich and poor are growing in many areas.

"The law has clearly reduced broad measures of inequality," said David Cutler, an economics professor at Harvard, who served in the Clinton administration and advised the 2008 Obama campaign on health issues. "These are people who blend into the background of the economy. They are cleaning your hotel room, making your sandwich. The law has helped this population enormously."

Until now, the impact of the law has been measured mostly in broad numbers of newly insured people—about 20 million by the administration's most recent account. But the Times's analysis of census data from 2014, the first year the heart of the law was in full effect, provides a finely detailed look at who the newly insured actually are—by race, education, occupation, immigration status, and family structure.

The analysis shows how the law lifted some of the most vulnerable citizens. Part-time workers gained insurance at a higher rate than full-time workers, and people with high school degrees gained it at double the rate of college graduates. Adults living in households headed by relatives, such as siblings or cousins—often a marker of economic distress—gained insurance at double the rate of those in traditional households.

The law's passage, without a single Republican vote, capped decades of efforts to enact a broader health insurance system. Medicaid and Medicare passed in the 1960s, but did little to help workers who did not receive insurance through their jobs. Presidents Nixon, Carter, and Clinton all tried and failed to win approval for expanded coverage, and the number of uninsured Americans grew to nearly a fifth of adults under the age of 65 by 2010, the year the Affordable Care Act passed.

The findings from the census data could inform the national dialogue, especially in this election year. Hispanics are a powerful voting force and the law is viewed favorably in Hispanic neighborhoods. But whether the sharp increase in coverage rates for Hispanics will translate into votes for Democrats who supported the law, or whether some Republicans might temper their vows to repeal it, is not clear. And the fact that so many who benefited under the law were not citizens (or voters)—1.2 million out of the total 8.7 million who got health insurance in 2014—could set off a new round of debate in a year when immigration has become a deeply polarizing issue.

About 60 percent of those non-citizens were Hispanic, mostly natives of Mexico and Central America who had been living in the United States for decades. Another third were Asian, mostly newer arrivals living in states like California, New York, and Texas. Illegal immigrants are not eligible for insurance under the law, but legal immigrants can qualify for subsidies in the insurance exchanges and those who have been in the country for more than five years can qualify for Medicaid.

The vast majority of the country's 11 million illegal immigrants, about 70 percent of whom are Hispanic, still lack coverage, said Mark Hugo Lopez, director of Hispanic research at the Pew Research Center.

Though the law has withstood two Supreme Court rulings that would have undermined its central elements, it continues to face challenges.

It requires most Americans to have health insurance and gives subsidies to those who cannot afford it. Even so, many still cannot afford policies. While it expanded Medicaid to cover more of the country's poor, the Supreme Court allowed states to opt-out and 19 have, leaving millions of people still uncovered.

But in low-income neighborhoods like this one in South Los Angeles, a historically poor patch of the city dotted with palm trees, small ranch houses and home to a growing Hispanic population, the law is having a big effect.

"From the vantage point of the poor and working poor, Obama care has been profound," said Jim Mangia, president of the St. John's Well Child and Family Center, a federally funded health clinic in South Los Angeles that has enrolled 18,000 new patients under the law, nearly all of them Hispanic or black and the vast majority in Medicaid. The clinic reported a 44 percent increase in cervical cancer screenings, a 25 percent increase in tobacco cessation therapy, and a 22 percent increase in the share of patients with controlled hypertension since 2014, the result, he said, of more patients having insurance.

One new patient, Angela Cruz, 60, is a typical example of a winner under the law. A legal immigrant who is not a citizen, she came to this country from El Salvador in 1990. She had never had health insurance in her 25 years of working in the United States, most recently as a nanny. She stitched together medical care through emergency rooms, free clinics, and home remedies. When she needed to pay for medicine for a painful bout of kidney stones, she stopped buying meat.

Then she got coverage under the health law's expansion of Medicaid in California.

Now, she said, "I don't have the stress of wondering—can I pay this—when sometimes I didn't have anything to pay it with."

Hispanics remain the least insured Americans, with only 67 percent having coverage in 2014, in part because so many illegal immigrants are uninsured.

Gains for blacks were muted because they disproportionately live in states that chose not to expand Medicaid. About 60 percent of poor blacks live in states that did not expand Medicaid. While the share of poor blacks covered by Medicaid did rise by two percentage points in those states, the rate rose by six points in states that expanded the program.

In all, minorities gained more than whites, making up two-thirds of the increase in insured adults across the country, and 70 percent of the increase in private insurance. Minority men who work as groundskeepers and janitors saw substantial gains, rising to 59 percent insured, up from 51 percent in 2013. Hispanic male construction workers rose to 43 percent insured, from 36 percent in 2013.

One such worker, Sergio Ortega, 51, a legal immigrant from Mexico who had never been insured before getting covered by Medicaid in 2014, said making a doctor's appointment seemed unthinkable without insurance, so he often simply ignored his health problems.

Several years ago, he started feeling tired, a condition that eventually drove him to quit his job demolishing buildings and start selling fruit from a street cart. By the time he sought treatment through his new coverage and discovered he had diabetes, his lower leg had to be amputated.

"I realized it was getting really bad because my foot started turning purple," said Mr. Ortega, who is a patient at St. John's.

Perhaps the biggest unmet promise of the law is that many it was supposed to help still cannot afford insurance. Alberto Torres, 50, a driver for a garment company in Los Angeles who could not afford insurance before the law, had signed up for a plan in 2014 for $41 a month. But this year his monthly premium jumped to $106—too much, he said, for his meager salary.

“I’m feeling not so good,” he said recently, waiting in line for help to look for a less expensive plan.

High deductibles are another big obstacle. “If you are living paycheck to paycheck and have nothing in the bank, insurance with a \$3,000 deductible might feel like no insurance at all,” said Larry Levitt, a senior vice president of the Kaiser Family Foundation.

Having insurance does not necessarily mean better health, but experts hope it could start to ease some of the worst disparities that have kept the United States close to the bottom of health rankings of rich countries.

Mr. Ortega has been fitted for a prosthetic leg. He is still learning how to use it.

“Now I don’t worry,” he said. “It’s a security, a comfort that I feel.”

3.13: Gerunds - Find Someone Who - Questions

GERUNDS - REVIEW

Find someone who ...

Walk around the classroom and speak to different people. Ask one question per person. If they answer 'yes', think of more related questions to ask about the topic → have a mini-conversation together about this topic. If they say 'no', say 'thanks', and 'good bye' and move on to ask another person.

e.g. Do you enjoy playing sports?

OR:

Yes, I do.

No, I don't.

What types of sports do you play?

OK, thanks. See you later.

I play soccer.

Bye.

How often do you play soccer?

I play soccer every weekend.

1. enjoys playing sports
2. believes dancing is fun
3. likes to go camping
4. puts off doing his/her laundry
5. practices speaking English everyday
6. plans on traveling during the holidays
7. is interested in taking more classes at Contra Costa College
8. is proud of having wonderful children
9. dreams about winning the lottery!

3.31: Wedding Interview and Writing

Interview Your Classmate!

Step 1. In your team, there will be one married person. Use the questions below to get as much information as you can about your classmate's wedding. Please note:

- As you ask and answer the questions, pay attention to using the correct verb tenses
- Both the interviewer and the interviewee should take notes on the answers - you don't need to write the whole sentence; just write the key information.

If you need the questions, they are also pasted below:

1. When did you get married?
2. Where did you get married?
3. Did you prefer to have a small wedding or a big wedding?
4. How many guests did you have?
5. Did you have fun? Explain.
6. What did you enjoy doing the most?
7. Before the wedding, what did you need to do?
8. Did you ask your friends or family to help you?
9. Did you practice dancing with your spouse before the wedding?
10. Did you keep dancing all night?
11. What did you promise your spouse to do at the wedding?
12. What type of food did you have?
13. How long was the wedding?
14. What kinds of gifts did you get?
15. Did you put off opening gifts until after the wedding or did you open them at the wedding?
16. Did you try to talk to everyone at your wedding?

Now, think of 3 more questions to ask your partner, to get more information about their wedding.

Make sure you have all the information you need to be able to write the story of your partner's wedding accurately.

Step 2: Writing

- Use the information that you got from interviewing your classmate about his/her wedding to write a paragraph.
- Make sure that your paragraph reads as a story; that means, the ideas and sentences flow logically and smoothly.
- Try to capture the spirit of the story as your classmate told you!
- If you were the person being interviewed [the married person], write about your own wedding, using the same questions.
- Pay attention to using correct verb tenses and use gerunds and infinitives appropriately.

Note: Your paragraph should be about 150-200 words.

Step 3: Editing

After you finish writing your paragraph, read your writing as a whole. Think about the following:

CONTENT:

- Do you like what you wrote?
- Does it flow logically?
- Do you want to change anything?

MECHANICS:

- Do your sentences all have subjects and verbs?
- Are the verb tenses and forms correct?
- Are you using gerunds and infinitives appropriately [follow questions as guide to help you]?
- Do all your sentences end with a period and begin with a capital letter?

3.32: Gerunds + Infinitives - Identify and Explain

In each of the following, underline the gerund or infinitive. Explain why it is used. The first one is done for you as an example.

1. I want you to speak to me after class. [infinitive 'to speak' used after the object pronoun 'you']
2. It is terrible to bully others.
3. I wanted to call you yesterday.
4. Have you considered seeing a counselor?
5. She is proud of having wonderful children.
6. You should never leave class without taking all your belongings.
7. She asked her parents to help her.
8. I regret not organizing my time better when I was younger.
9. The consequences of cheating on an exam can be severe.
10. I am prepared to take the next test.
11. Going hiking is one of my favorite hobbies.
12. My friend went to the mall to buy some shoes.
13. Living in a new country can be difficult at first.
14. It is so nice to meet you.
15. It is a good idea not to sleep late before a test.
16. Not getting enough sleep can cause you to do poorly on tests.

3.34: Used to vs. Be used to

Used to vs. Be used to

Used to = habit / true fact about the past

no longer true

- I used to take the bus to school. [Then I bought a car. Now I drive. I don't take the bus anymore.]
 - She used to live with my parents.
 - We used to live outside of the U.S.
 - I didn't use to drink coffee when I was a child.
1. What did you use to do when you were a child?
 2. Where did you use to live before you came to the U.S.?
 3. Who did you use to live with before you came to the U.S.?

Be used to + gerund = be accustomed to something / at first difficult but gradually becoming easier

- I am used to living in the U.S.
- I am used to driving a car.
- She is used to working and studying at the same time.
- My students are used to working with a partner in class.

Get used to + gerund = to become accustomed to something / at the beginning of the change

- When I first came to the U.S., I had to get used to calling everyone 'you'. I had to get used to living in a new culture. I had to get used to speaking a new language. Now, after living here for many years, I am more used to all of that.

BE USED TO + GERUND = be accustomed to / perhaps it was difficult at first, but now you can do it

1. When you first came to the U.S., what things did you have to get used to doing?
2. Are you used to living in the U.S. or are there things that are still very difficult for you?
3. Are you used to speaking to native speakers?
4. Are you used to taking classes in an American college?
5. Are you used to driving in the U.S.?

3.35: Writing Practices

Part 1.

Answer each of the following questions. Pay attention to using the correct verb tense and using the correct form of infinitive or gerund.

1. What were you responsible for doing as a child?
2. What do you dislike doing on the weekends?
3. Have you ever gone camping? Where / when?
4. Where do you usually go shopping for groceries?
5. Who do you dream of meeting? [think of a famous person]
6. What are some things you do to relax?
7. Have you ever left home without locking the doors?
8. What do you plan on having for lunch today?
9. Who did you want to be like when you were a kid? [think of a role model]
10. What have you gotten used to eating since you came to the US?

Part 2. Writing a Letter

Imagine that you have the chance to write a letter to President-Elect Biden [and that he will read it!]. You can ask him to do ONE thing. What would you ask him to do? What problem do you want him to focus on? It can be a domestic or an international issue. Why do you think this problem is so important? What do we need to do to solve it? To write an effective letter, follow the steps below:

- Begin your letter with a greeting [Dear Mr. President-Elect / Dear Mr. Biden]
- State exactly why you are writing the letter to him
- Clearly state the specific problem that you want him to focus on
- Explain briefly why this problem is so important / who does it affect and how?
- Explain what you want him to do to solve the problem
- End your letter with a closing statement [sincerely / with gratitude / respectfully] and sign your name

Pay attention to:

- Correct sentence structure
- Using verb tenses appropriately
- Using gerunds & infinitives appropriately when possible
- Using correct punctuation and capitalization

3.36: Reading - Why Bilinguals Are Smarter-grammar-1

Why Bilinguals Are Smarter

<http://www.nytimes.com/2012/03/18/op...gewanted=print>

SPEAKING two languages rather than just one has obvious practical benefits in an increasingly globalized world. But in recent years, scientists have begun to show that the advantages of bilingualism are even more fundamental than being able to converse with a wider range of people. Being bilingual, it turns out, makes you smarter. It can have a profound effect on your brain, improving cognitive skills not related to language and even shielding against dementia in old age.

This view of bilingualism is remarkably different from the understanding of bilingualism through much of the 20th century. Researchers, educators and policy makers long considered a second language to be an interference, cognitively speaking, that hindered a child's academic and intellectual development.

They were not wrong about the interference: there is ample evidence that in a bilingual's brain both language systems are active even when he is using only one language, thus creating situations in which one system obstructs the other. But this interference, researchers are finding out, isn't so much a handicap as a blessing in disguise. It forces the brain to resolve internal conflict, giving the mind a workout that strengthens its cognitive muscles.

Bilinguals, for instance, seem to be more adept than monolinguals at solving certain kinds of mental puzzles. In a 2004 study by the psychologists Ellen Bialystok and Michelle Martin-Rhee, bilingual and monolingual preschoolers were asked to sort blue circles and red squares presented on a computer screen into two digital bins — one marked with a blue square and the other marked with a red circle.

In the first task, the children had to sort the shapes by color, placing blue circles in the bin marked with the blue square and red squares in the bin marked with the red circle. Both groups did this with comparable ease. Next, the children were asked to sort by shape, which was more challenging because it required placing the images in a bin marked with a conflicting color. The bilinguals were quicker at performing this task.

The collective evidence from a number of such studies suggests that the bilingual experience improves the brain's so-called executive function — a command system that directs the attention processes that we use for planning, solving problems and performing various other mentally demanding tasks. These processes include ignoring distractions to stay focused, switching attention willfully from one thing to another and holding information in mind — like remembering a sequence of directions while driving.

Why does the tussle between two simultaneously active language systems improve these aspects of cognition? Until recently, researchers thought the bilingual advantage stemmed primarily from an ability for inhibition that was honed by the exercise of suppressing one language system: this suppression, it was thought, would help train the bilingual mind to ignore distractions in other contexts. But that explanation increasingly appears to be inadequate, since studies have shown that bilinguals perform better than monolinguals even at tasks that do not require inhibition, like threading a line through an ascending series of numbers scattered randomly on a page.

The key difference between bilinguals and monolinguals may be more basic: a heightened ability to monitor the environment. "Bilinguals have to switch languages quite often — you may talk to your father in one language and to your mother in another language," says Albert Costa, a researcher at the University of Pompeu Fabra in Spain. "It requires keeping track of changes around you in the same way that we monitor our surroundings when driving." In a study comparing German-Italian bilinguals with Italian monolinguals on monitoring tasks, Mr. Costa and his colleagues found that the bilingual subjects not only performed better, but they also did so with less activity in parts of the brain involved in monitoring, indicating that they were more efficient at it.

The bilingual experience appears to influence the brain from infancy to old age (and there is reason to believe that it may also apply to those who learn a second language later in life).

In a 2009 study led by Agnes Kovacs of the International School for Advanced Studies in Trieste, Italy, 7-month-old babies exposed to two languages from birth were compared with peers raised with one language. In an initial set of trials, the infants were presented with an audio cue and then shown a puppet on one side of a screen. Both infant groups learned to look at that side of the screen in anticipation of the puppet. But in a later set of trials, when the puppet began appearing on the opposite side of the screen, the babies exposed to a bilingual environment quickly learned to switch their anticipatory gaze in the new direction while the other babies did not.

Bilingualism's effects also extend into the twilight years. In a recent study of 44 elderly Spanish-English bilinguals, scientists led by the neuropsychologist Tamar Gollan of the University of California, San Diego, found that individuals with a higher degree of bilingualism — measured through a comparative evaluation of proficiency in each language — were more resistant than others to the onset of dementia and other symptoms of Alzheimer's disease: the higher the degree of bilingualism, the later the age of onset.

Nobody ever doubted the power of language. But who would have imagined that the words we hear and the sentences we speak might be leaving such a deep imprint?

Read and annotate 'Why Bilinguals Are Smarter'. Pay attention to the bold, underlined expressions – can you explain why they are used? Then answer the following questions:

1. What is the main point of the story?
2. What did people use to think about bilingualism?
3. What has research shown about the connection between bilingualism and the ability to pay attention?
4. What has research shown about the connection between bilingualism and Alzheimer's?

3.37: Pre- and Post- Writing Activities - Bilingualism

Pre-Writing:

Take a few minutes to write your thoughts on the following questions:

What is bilingualism?

What are the benefits of bilingualism?

What are some challenges of bilingualism?

Post-Writing:

- Look up any new vocabulary words
- Read the article again to understand better
- Answer the 4 questions after the article - write the answers in your notebook
- Look at the bold, underlined expressions - if they include a gerund or infinitive, try to explain why it is used in each case

4.1: Modals - Introduction

Modals

- Can
- Could
- May
- Might
- Should
- Must
- Will
- ...

Form - sentences

- Subject + modal + base form of the verb
 - I can play the piano.
- NOT:
 - I can playing the piano.
 - I can played the piano.
 - He can plays the piano.

Modals - questions

- Switch subject + modal:
 - Can you play the piano?
 - Will you call me later?
 - Where should we meet after class?
 - Why can't we smoke indoors?

Modals - negatives

- Add 'not' to the modal:
 - She cannot live alone.
 - I will not be able to call you later.
 - You must not drink and drive.
- Contract in some cases:
 - She can't live alone.
 - I won't be able to call you later.
 - Not with: must, may, or might

Must

- Legal obligation:
 - You must wear your seatbelt in a car.
 - You must not smoke inside the building.
- Asserting authority:
 - Mother to child: 'You must finish your homework before dinner.'
 - Boss to employee: 'You must complete the report by next week.'

Practice – Reader, P. 77

Must – legal obligation / if not, you break a law

According to the law, what must you do or not do in each of these cases:

- In a car:
- On an airplane:
- In the library:
- When crossing a street:
- When traveling abroad:

Have to / have got to

- Personal need:
 - I have to study for my test.
 - I 've got to study for my test.
 - I had to study for my test last week.
 - I will have to study for my test next week.
- Personal obligation:
 - She has to call her mother every day.
 - She 's got to call her mother every day.

Practice – Reader, P. 77

1. What do you have to do this weekend?
2. What do you have to do if you want to get a good grade?
3. What did you have to do last weekend?
4. What did you have to do before you came to the U.S.?
5. What is your goal? What will you have to do to reach your goal?
6. Where do you have to go after class?
7. Who do you have to call every day?
8. What time do you have to wake up every day?
9. What time did you have to wake up every day when you were a child?

Be supposed to – reporting an expectation / obligation / rule

- You are supposed to wear a seatbelt in a car.
- Your landlord is supposed to provide heat in the winter months.
- I am supposed to call my doctor today.
- Students are supposed to complete their homework before class.
- When I was a child, I was supposed to clean my own room.

Practice

1. What are you supposed to do as a student?

2. What are tenants supposed to do?
3. What are landlords supposed to do?

4.2: Have To vs Must

HAVE TO – personal necessity or obligation

1. What do you have to do this weekend?
2. What do you have to do if you want to get a good grade?
3. What did you have to do last weekend?
4. What did you have to do before you came to the U.S.?
5. What is your goal? What will you have to do to reach your goal?
6. Where do you have to go after class?
7. Who do you have to call every day?
8. What time do you have to wake up every day?
9. What time did you have to wake up every day when you were a child?

MUST – legal obligation / if not, you break a law

According to the law, what must you do or not do in each of these cases:

1. In a car:
2. On an airplane:
3. In the library:
4. When crossing a street:
5. When traveling abroad:

4.3: Can / Could / May

Can / could = ability

Can = ability:

- I can speak Spanish. [I know how to / I am able to]
- She can ride a motorcycle.

Could = ability in the past:

- When I was a child, I could run for hours. [Now that I'm older, I can't because I get tired quickly!]

Can / may / could = permission

Can/May = permission

- You can use a dictionary while in class.
- You may not use your cellphone in class.

Could = permission in the past

- When I was a child, I couldn't stay up after 10pm.

Can = possibility

Can = possibility:

- She can afford to pay $800 for rent.
- She can't afford to pay more than $800 for rent.
- I can meet you on zoom at 3pm today.

4.4: Can-May-Could Practice

Can/May/Could Practice

Answer each of the following questions with a complete sentence. Make sure to use the same modal[s] as in the question. Pay attention to the meaning of the modal in the parentheses.

1. What are some things that you can do? [ability]
2. What are some things that you can't do? [ability]
3. What could you do as a child that you cannot do now? [ability]
4. What can you do now that you could not do as a child? [permission]
5. What are some things that you may not do in class? [permission]
6. What is some thing that you cannot afford to buy? [ability/possibility]
7. When can you register for classes for next semester? [possibility]

4.5: Related Expressions

Related Expressions

There are often expressions that can have the same meaning as some modals. For example:

- I can speak a little Spanish. [can = ability]
- I am able to speak a little Spanish.

OR

- I may have a pet in my apartment. [may = permission]
- I am allowed to have a pet in my apartment.
- I am permitted to have a pet in my apartment.

These related expressions can be used in different verb tenses:

- When I was a child, I could stay up until 10pm. [could = past permission]
- When I was a child, I was allowed to stay up until 10pm.
- When I was a child, I was permitted to stay up until 10pm.

OR

- The students could finish the quiz in 30 minutes. [could = past ability]
- The students were able to finish the quiz in 30 minutes.

4.9: Can-Must-Should Examples

Circle modal and underline the verb following it.

Determine the meaning of the modal.

1. I can speak 3 languages.
2. You must not smoke on a bus.
3. When I was a child, I could not stay up past 10pm.
4. I've got to leave!
5. You may use a dictionary while in class.
6. At work, I am supposed to help customers.
7. I can afford $600 for rent each month.
8. If you have a stomachache, you should drink some ginger tea.
9. You'd better not park in the red zone or you'll get a big ticket!

4.10: Negatives of Modals

NEGATIVES OF MODALS

Example	Meaning
1. You must not drink and drive .	Prohibited / against the law
2. You don't have to sit in the same seat or work with the same partner everyday.	Not required / a choice
3. You don't have to do any homework for your grammar class this weekend.	Not required / not obligated

7. When I was a child, I couldn't go out by myself at night.	Not permitted in the past
8. You shouldn't go to bed late on the night before a test.	Advice / bad idea
9. You'd better not lose your wallet [or someone can steal your money and credit cards].	Warning

4.11: Negatives of Modals

Negatives of Modals - Practice

Answer each question with the negative form of the modal:

1. What are things you must not do:
 - On an airplane:
 - In our class:
 - In a car:
2. What are things you cannot/may not do if you rent an apartment?
3. What are some things you don't have to over the weekend?
4. What should children not do if they want their parents to be happy?
5. What are some things you had better not do or your neighbors might get angry?

4.12: Negatives of Modals - Examples

For each sentence, underline the negative modal and circle/hi-light the verb after the modal. Then write the meaning of the modal - what does it mean in the sentence?

Example

1. You must not smoke in buildings.
2. You don't have to wear a uniform at this school.
3. I don't have to work this weekend.

4.15: Talking about Certainties and Possibilities

Talking about certainties and possibilities:

- Certainty in the future: We will not have class on December 13th .
You will take a test when we finish this chapter.
- Possibility in the future: We may return to campus for Fall 2021.
We might return to campus for Fall 2021.
Maybe we will return to campus for Fall 2021.
- Possibility now: The teacher is absent.
She may be sick.
She might be stuck in traffic.

Examples:

- What are some things you will/will not do over winter holiday?

I will travel to my country.

I will not come to work.

- What are some things you might do over the weekend?

I might visit my parents. [But I'm not sure if I'll have time. It depends on whether or not I finish my work early.]

I might watch a movie at home. Or I might go for a walk. [It depends on the weather. If it's raining, I'll watch a movie. But if it's nice and sunny, I'll go for a hike.]

Practice:

1. What are some things that you will do over the Christmas break?
2. What are some things that you might/may do over the Christmas break?

4.16: Must for Logical Conclusions

Must for Logical Conclusions

In life, we often observe things and reach logical conclusions based on our observations.

For example, I may walk into my parents' home and smell delicious food. Based on that, I can conclude:

My mother must be cooking!

Or: I might look outside the window and see people carrying umbrellas. Based on that observation, I can conclude:

It must be raining.

Read each situation carefully. Write a sentence using 'must' to express the logical conclusion you would reach.

1. Many people are wearing shorts and t-shirts.
2. Our teacher is not in class today.
3. Usually, there's no traffic at this time of the day. But today, there is terrible traffic on the freeway.
4. Gloria gets A's on all her tests.
5. Jane is crying.
6. At a party: Everyone is laughing and dancing.
7. Jose runs 2 miles everyday.
8. The student is yawning.

4.25: Reading - President Obama's speech - Immigration - Structures

From: <http://www.npr.org/blogs/thetwo-way/...on-immigration>

My fellow Americans, tonight, I'd like to talk with you about immigration. For more than 200 years, our tradition of welcoming immigrants from around the world has given us a tremendous advantage over other nations. It's kept us youthful, dynamic, and entrepreneurial. It has shaped our character as a people with limitless possibilities – people not trapped by our past, but able to remake ourselves as we choose.

But today, our immigration system is broken, and everybody knows it.

Families who enter our country the right way and play by the rules watch others flout the rules. Business owners who offer their workers good wages and benefits see the competition exploit undocumented immigrants by paying them far less. All of us take offense to anyone who reaps the rewards of living in America without taking on the responsibilities of living in America. And undocumented immigrants who desperately want to embrace those responsibilities see little option but to remain in the shadows, or risk their families being torn apart.

It's been this way for decades. And for decades, we haven't done much about it.

When I took office, I committed to fixing this broken immigration system. And I began by doing what I could to secure our borders. Today, we have more agents and technology deployed to secure our southern border than at any time in our history. And over the past six years, illegal border crossings have been cut by more than half. Although this summer, there was a brief spike in unaccompanied children being apprehended at our border, the number of such children is now actually lower than it's been in nearly two years. Overall, the number of people trying to cross our border illegally is at its lowest level since the 1970s. Those are the facts.

Meanwhile, I worked with Congress on a comprehensive fix, and last year, 68 Democrats, Republicans, and Independents came together to pass a bipartisan bill in the Senate. It wasn't perfect. It was a compromise, but it reflected common sense. It would have doubled the number of border patrol agents, while giving undocumented immigrants a pathway to citizenship if they paid a fine, started paying their taxes, and went to the back of the line. And independent experts said that it would help grow our economy and shrink our deficits.

Had the House of Representatives allowed that kind of a bill a simple yes-or-no vote, it would have passed with support from both parties, and today it would be the law. But for a year and a half now, Republican leaders in the House have refused to allow that simple vote.

Now, I continue to believe that the best way to solve this problem is by working together to pass that kind of common sense law. But until that happens, there are actions I have the legal authority to take as President – the same kinds of actions taken by Democratic and Republican Presidents before me – that will help make our immigration system more fair and more just.

Tonight, I am announcing those actions.

First, we'll build on our progress at the border with additional resources for our law enforcement personnel so that they can stem the flow of illegal crossings, and speed the return of those who do cross over.

Second, I will make it easier and faster for high-skilled immigrants, graduates, and entrepreneurs to stay and contribute to our economy, as so many business leaders have proposed.

Third, we'll take steps to deal responsibly with the millions of undocumented immigrants who already live in our country.

I want to say more about this third issue, because it generates the most passion and controversy. Even as we are a nation of immigrants, we are also a nation of laws. Undocumented workers broke our immigration laws, and I believe that they must be held accountable – especially those who may be dangerous. That's why, over the past six years, deportations of criminals are up 80 percent. And that's why we're going to keep focusing enforcement resources on actual threats to our security. Felons, not families. Criminals, not children. Gang members, not a mother who's working hard to provide for her kids. We'll prioritize, just like law enforcement does every day.

But even as we focus on deporting criminals, the fact is, millions of immigrants – in every state, of every race and nationality – will still live here illegally. And let's be honest – tracking down, rounding up, and deporting millions of people isn't realistic. Anyone who suggests otherwise isn't being straight with you. It's also not who we are as Americans. After all, most of these immigrants have been here a long time. They work hard, often in tough, low-paying jobs. They support their families. They worship at our churches. Many of their kids are American-born or spent most of their lives here, and their hopes, dreams, and patriotism are just like ours.

As my predecessor, President Bush, once put it: "They are a part of American life."

Now here's the thing: we expect people who live in this country to play by the rules. We expect that those who cut the line will not be unfairly rewarded. So we're going to offer the following deal: If you've been in America for more than five years; if you have children who are American citizens or legal residents; if you register, pass a criminal background check, and you're willing to pay your fair share of taxes – you'll be able to apply to stay in this country temporarily, without fear of deportation. You can come out of the shadows and get right with the law.

That's what this deal is. Now let's be clear about what it isn't. This deal does not apply to anyone who has come to this country recently. It does not apply to anyone who might come to America illegally in the future. It does not grant citizenship, or the right to stay here permanently, or offer the same benefits that citizens receive – only Congress can do that. All we're saying is we're not going to deport you.

I know some of the critics of this action call it amnesty. Well, it's not. Amnesty is the immigration system we have today – millions of people who live here without paying their taxes or playing by the rules, while politicians use the issue to scare people and whip up votes at election time.

That's the real amnesty – leaving this broken system the way it is. Mass amnesty would be unfair. Mass deportation would be both impossible and contrary to our character. What I'm describing is accountability – a commonsense, middle ground approach: If you meet the criteria, you can come out of the shadows and get right with the law. If you're a criminal, you'll be deported. If you plan to enter the U.S. illegally, your chances of getting caught and sent back just went up.

The actions I'm taking are not only lawful, they're the kinds of actions taken by every single Republican President and every single Democratic President for the past half century. And to those Members of Congress who question my authority to make our immigration system work better, or question the wisdom of me acting where Congress has failed, I have one answer: Pass a bill. I want to work with both parties to pass a more permanent legislative solution. And the day I sign that bill into law, the actions I take will no longer be necessary. Meanwhile, don't let a disagreement over a single issue be a dealbreaker on every issue. That's not how our democracy works, and Congress certainly shouldn't shut down our government again just because we disagree on this. Americans are tired of gridlock. What our country needs from us right now is a common purpose – a higher purpose.

Most Americans support the types of reforms I've talked about tonight. But I understand the disagreements held by many of you at home. Millions of us, myself included, go back generations in this country, with ancestors who put in the painstaking work to become citizens. So we don't like the notion that anyone might get a free pass to American citizenship. I know that some worry immigration will change the very fabric of who we are, or take our jobs, or stick it to middle-class families at a time when they already feel like they've gotten the raw end of the deal for over a decade. I hear these concerns. But that's not what these steps would do. Our history and the facts show that immigrants are a net plus for our economy and our society. And I believe it's important that all of us have this debate without impugning each other's character.

Because for all the back-and-forth of Washington, we have to remember that this debate is about something bigger. It's about who we are as a country, and who we want to be for future generations.

Are we a nation that tolerates the hypocrisy of a system where workers who pick our fruit and make our beds never have a chance to get right with the law? Or are we a nation that gives them a chance to make amends, take responsibility, and give their kids a better future?

Are we a nation that accepts the cruelty of ripping children from their parents' arms? Or are we a nation that values families, and works to keep them together?

Are we a nation that educates the world's best and brightest in our universities, only to send them home to create businesses in countries that compete against us? Or are we a nation that encourages them to stay and create jobs, businesses, and industries right here in America?

That's what this debate is all about. We need more than politics as usual when it comes to immigration; we need reasoned, thoughtful, compassionate debate that focuses on our hopes, not our fears.

I know the politics of this issue are tough. But let me tell you why I have come to feel so strongly about it. Over the past few years, I have seen the determination of immigrant fathers who worked two or three jobs, without taking a dime from the government, and at risk at any moment of losing it all, just to build a better life for their kids. I've seen the heartbreak and anxiety of children whose mothers might be taken away from them just because they didn't have the right papers. I've seen the courage of students who, except for the circumstances of their birth, are as American as Malia or Sasha; students who bravely come out as undocumented in hopes they could make a difference in a country they love. These people – our neighbors, our classmates, our friends – they did not come here in search of a free ride or an easy life. They came to work, and study, and serve in our military, and above all, contribute to America's success.

Tomorrow, I'll travel to Las Vegas and meet with some of these students, including a young woman named Astrid Silva. Astrid was brought to America when she was four years old. Her only possessions were a cross, her doll, and the frilly dress she had on. When she started school, she didn't speak any English. She caught up to the other kids by reading newspapers and watching PBS, and became a good student. Her father worked in landscaping. Her mother cleaned other people's homes. They wouldn't let Astrid apply to a technology magnet school for fear the paperwork would out her as an undocumented immigrant – so she applied behind their back and got in. Still, she mostly lived in the shadows – until her grandmother, who visited every year from Mexico, passed away, and she couldn't travel to the funeral without risk of being found out and deported. It was around that time she decided to begin advocating for herself and others like her, and today, Astrid Silva is a college student working on her third degree.

Are we a nation that kicks out a striving, hopeful immigrant like Astrid – or are we a nation that finds a way to welcome her in?

Scripture tells us that we shall not oppress a stranger, for we know the heart of a stranger – we were strangers once, too.

My fellow Americans, we are and always will be a nation of immigrants. We were strangers once, too. And whether our forebears were strangers who crossed the Atlantic, or the Pacific, or the Rio Grande, we are here only because this country welcomed them in, and taught them that to be an American is about something more than what we look like, or what our last names are, or how we worship. What makes us Americans is our shared commitment to an ideal – that all of us are created equal, and all of us have the chance to make of our lives what we will.

That's the country our parents and grandparents and generations before them built for us. That's the tradition we must uphold. That's the legacy we must leave for those who are yet to come.

Thank you, God bless you, and God bless this country we love.
